Dear Ms. Begivenga:

In July, 2004, I consummated an early termination on a 2003 Maxima due to numerous thefts of the Xenon headlights. I opted for a 2004 Murano. The manager, Mr. Mike Delacruz at Nissan World, Springfield, New Jersey assured me that the Murano did not have this problem. I leased the car.

On Saturday, January 29, 2005, in East Orange, New Jersey, while shopping, a thief entered my car via the keyhole, which caused the windows to go down on the driver's and passenger's sides. They popped the hood and stole the left light. The right light was not taken because the thief must have been discovered. The easy entrance is a defect. Such a defect, if not corrected could happen over and over again.

Pursuant to the New Jersey Lemon Law (N.J. SA 56:12-29 to 56:12-49), I hereby make a written demand for relief of the vehicle under the Lemon Law, and repayment for repair costs, loss of car service, insurance costs and any other compensation relative to the Law.

Knowledge of such easy entrance by Nissan North America, Inc., and Nissan World dealership make you both liable for said defects. I seek speedy resolution of this problem.

Respectfully,
