Dear Auto Safety Hotline,

I own a 1992 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. I've had it for four years, bought it second hand. When I first brought it home, I noticed that the information on the dash, the odometer and all the other readings, would turn off occasionally, and then blink right back on.

The computer in my dash now has progressively gotten worse, which concerns me to the point that I can rarely drive it. I can't tell how much gas I have, my speed, or anything. The shops I have asked about it claim that they don't know too much about it.

Could it be possible that the problem may be part of a manufacturer recall? Any information you can provide me would be very useful.
Thank you.

Sincerely,
