while it is under warranty costing NONE to him for any service, he had done all services at BMW. So I can provide you all the records from BMW.

My point with all this is that, I have all the service records of my cars and for my uncle cars. None of the cars had any problem with Vibration Problem that is directly related to Brake Rotors except my 2000 Infiniti I30. I even replaced my all four rotors at 39,868 Miles and still facing this problem about every 15000miles. So please check into this problem because I am sure there may be more consumer who faced this problem. Also does this fall under Lemon-Law?

Thank You,
