To whom it may concern

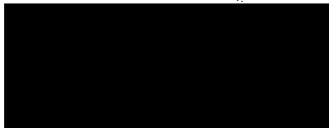

I am having trouble with my 2008 Chevy Trailblazer. My husband has had to replace the fuse box under the hood because of an electrical fire caused by the truck not turning off. (the keys were out of the truck) Also we have had to replace the lower ball joints because they wore out the front two tires so bad they almost burst before we could get them changed. We asked the guy who done it if the lower ball joints were the reasons the tires were like they were he said yes. We have had the truck for just over one year and had more trouble out of this one than our '98 Honda Accord. It's hard to work on a vehicle when you have three children and only one working. Please let us know if there is a recall on the lower ball joints or on the fuse box (electrical) (that's still is not right). Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,
