There was no "incident". My concern is that a automobile should not have to have new rear brake Pads and "refinished" Rotors at only 30,000 miles. I consider this situation as a serious defect in this particular model. I have driven many cars and have never had to replace any brake parts so soon. Usually, the front brakes wear first. The brakes were becoming very poor and I had to have them serviced for safety reasons. I would hope that you would check into this as I really feel that it is important that the general public is aware of this apparent defect in the brake system on this model. Thank you
