To whom it may concern:

I am writing this to Toyota of North America and the Consumer Products Safety Commission to inform you of the problem I had with my 2007 Toyota Corolla and to try to ensure that this does not happen to anyone else.

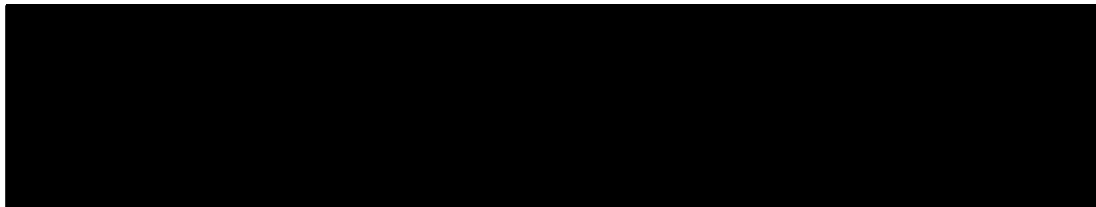

On March 14, 2011 I was pulling into a parking space at work, foot on the brake and almost to the parking bumper, when all of a sudden my car went click, whir and vroom. I took my foot off the brake but the car jumped the bumper, went through some grass to a driveway and re-entered the parking lot. I'm not sure how fast it was going, but I went through shrubs and grass and managed to avoid other cars and people until I got the car into neutral and crashed into a tree.

The car was totaled and I went to the emergency room, where they found nothing broken or injured. I suffered a lot of pain in my back, but went to the chiropractor the next day. Twelve treatments later I am pain free and feeling quite well.

The police officer who took the report called me Mario Andretti and complimented me on my success in avoiding cars and pedestrians. It was quite a harrowing experience that I am still recalling vividly.

I sincerely hope this will help ensure that there is no one else out there who will go through this experience or worse. I am so thankful that I wasn't on the Turnpike at the time! At any rate, I am reporting this problem and hope some action can be taken.
