Re: 2008 Sonata
Vin No: 5NPET46C88H

To Whom It May Concern:

On August 14, 2013, my son drove my 2008 Hyundai Sonata to the University of Maryland, pulled into a parking spot and, when he tried to straighten the car, discovered that it would not shift into reverse or park. Two security guards pushed the car out of the parking spot so that he could shift into drive and he immediately left the campus to return home but, while driving on the 495 Beltway, it became apparent that the cruise control was not responding normally by disengaging when he applied the brakes. He immediately drove to Lee's Auto Center in Wheaton. At that location the brake light switch was determined to be faulty and was replaced. I was charged $89.58 for parts and labor (the part that was replaced is identified as: 93810-3K000>PABB-GF30<INFAC; there is also a NH 1 on the item).

After searching the internet I found that there apparently had been a recall for this problem but the information that I retrieved limited the recall to 2006-2007 and, I believe, the 2011 Sonata (as well as other models). I noticed several different notices on the internet regarding this recall for the Sonata but I did not locate a recall notice for the 2008 Sonata which I find perplexing. I feel that the cost I incurred for replacing this item should be reimbursed to me. Enclosed is a copy of the bill that I paid.

In attempting to locate information regarding the above mentioned problem, I noted another pending recall for the Sonata regarding the rear crossmember. The recall for this problem is scheduled to begin this month (recall number: 113). What is the status of this recall notice with regards to my car?

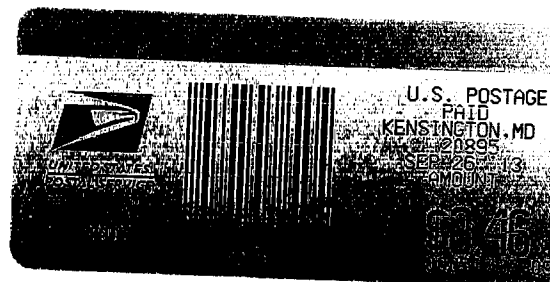

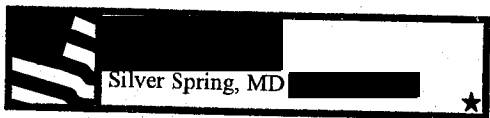

Very truly yours,
