

To Whom it may concern:

OCT 16 2014

I purchased a 2014 Subaru Impresa four door sedan after taking it for a test drive. Shortly after I felt an unusual wind problem with it being very unpredictable making it unstable therefore making me feel unsafe behind the wheel at times.

I've driven quite a few cars and trucks in my time and never experienced this problem. It takes more than the fifteen minute test drive to catch this problem.

I drove a 2004 Toyota Scion XB for 160,000 miles. It is also a lightweight car and never experienced this problem.

I drove the Subaru Impresa seven thousand miles to get the feel of it with no success.

I'm disappointed in my car. The dealer mechanic tells me its the nature of the car.

I talked and drove another Subaru (outback) owners car and he didn't have this problem.

I hope this is repairable, as I do like the car.

Sincerely,

HN
