WHAT HAPPENED [\[EDIT\]](#)

Form trouble?
Chat now.

Describe what happened so we can understand the issue...

I bought my 2006 Nissan Altima brand new, and have taken very good care of it. Just recently through research I found out that there are four open recalls on the 2006 Nissan Alitmas. When contacting Nissan about the recall situation, they responded by telling us that the VIN number didn't show any recalls. Once I filed complaints through the Department of Transportation and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is when I found out about the four open recalls. I have been continuously contacting Nissan about this issue to get this resolved. I made them aware that I have, all out of my pocket, had to replace three motors, two transmissions, 2 radiators, 1 alternator, and the A/C. I sent Nissan, DOT, and the NHTSA records of all the maintenance done on the car. All done by licensed businesses. This situation is very hard for me. I' am a single mother doing my best to raise my only child. My son has almost lost his life on Interstate 95 North coming home from college for the holidays due to the engine stalling. He was travelling approximately 72 mph when the engine shut off without notice, causing him swerve out of the way of transfer trucks and other cars. My son was completely TERRIFIED for the simple fact that he was just that close to losing his life. Going on four months now he has been without transportation. He has missed a number of classes, and significant hours at work. Overall, something needs and has to be done about this, but from the looks of the situation, Nissan is making this task very difficult.

DESIRED RESOLUTION [\[EDIT\]](#)

What do you think would be a fair resolution to your issue?

In all honesty, I feel that it is only fair that I should be compensated for the entire car, for the simple fact that I purchased the car in 2006 and the first couple recalls came out in 2007 without us being notified. Also compensation for all the heartache and distress that this has caused. My only son came very close to losing his live. I'm hoping and praying that justice will be served.
