I have received two re-call notices pertaining to my 2005 Dodge Ram 1500 pickup. VIN: 1D7HA1BN3JS [REDACTED] one is for the rear axle pinion nut threads the other is for driver airbag inflator housing. First of all why with something that could cause an accident or even death did it take ten years to contact me about this serious matter? Second one dealership that I would have to go to is forty miles away then if they have to order parts would require several trips close to eighty miles both ways, the other Dodge dealer is fifty miles one way same problem. There are other dealerships like Chevrolet that is only eight miles away could I use them instead of driving so far away since I am driving a truck that could cause an accident at anytime also living in Florida when the humidity is very high an airbag could burst at anytime..

I am very upset about these re-calls and am going to look into this matter further, again, why ten years to be contacted?

Thank You

P.S. Had any re-calls on this truck been issued prior to contacting me?
