I'm responding to the email and the report that was sent. A couple major things there was no crash or fire. The car has had several recalls. The rods, The motor being the biggest one. And they refused to give me a motor. My car is acting up and is burning over a quarter oil per day. It continues to act up. And even totally stop. It's also jolted forward several times on the highway I thought somebody hit me in the back in. This is all motor related. And they refused to give me a motor. I have a recall for the motor and I also have an extended warranty for the motor. I've showed them that I've done schedule maintenance and oil changes monthly. I was on time for every recall. That was another air in the report. Again there's been several recalls I just want the motor that I'm owed by the recall. Thank you for your attention to this matter.
