

To Whom it may concern;

My wife and I own a 2009 Malibu which purchased from an estate in 2013 with approximately 3500 miles. After driving it up to 92000 miles presently, the power steering became inoperative. I visited my Chevrolet dealer and they appraised me that ^{there} was a callback order on the problem, but we were never notified of the defect!

I am asking if you or General Motors could direct me how I receive some help in this matter. I'm [REDACTED] of age, on a limited budget and could use a little ^{help} in this matter.

I have all the service records on my car since we have owned it.

By the way, the power steering quit at an intersection and almost caused us a real serious accident. I believe that we should have been informed of this defect by way of mail or phone of this problem!

If you check my records you will see that I have no accidents with this car and I re-registered the car in my name after her passing.

Respectfully,

[REDACTED]
