I'm wondering what the status of my issue is. I know this is an issue because there are many documented cases online and many of them have reported this to NHTSA and BMW of North America. This is a huge problem and BMW was allowed to exclude the station wagons from the recall of all the other model of cars, even though the engine is the exact same.

BMW should be making this right as it was nefarious to exclude these cars. Its was a dereliction of their duty to not even inform the owners of these cars that their engines would at some point receive catastrophic damage because of the problem they created.

My car stalled in a roadway, at night, due to this problem. It was very dangerous for me to get to safety and to retrieve my car. Its caused stress on my life and it has also cost me a lot of money, its not even fixed yet! BMW knew this was a problem and they tried to save money by excluding some of the cars that this happened to during the original recall.

Thank You
