

This recall affects certain model year 2019 through 2024 trucks and SUVs, including the Chevrolet Silverado 1500 and GMC Sierra 1500; the Chevrolet Tahoe, Suburban, and GMC Yukon; and the Cadillac Escalade. While the defect itself is the central issue in the lawsuits, the main argument made by the plaintiffs of this consolidated lawsuit is that the repairs offered by GM (a change in engine oil spec) are insufficient to correct the defects in the engines. The class action lawsuit is set to proceed in Michigan.
