

RE: Trailer Identification Number:

August 2008

Dear Stratos Customer:

Back in June of 2006, Stratos Boats, Inc. sent you a notice in accordance with the requirements of the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act because of a potential motor vehicle safety defect may exist in certain 2002 - 2006 Stratos trailers that are equipped with a retractable tongue. These trailers may have a defect in the retractable tongue that poses, if it fails, a threat to your safety.

Stratos included with the notice pictures showing a properly built tongue and one with a gap between the bottom insert and the brake actuator housing. If the tongue was not manufactured to the required specifications (gap is present), the bottom of the top insert could crack in the area of the gap. If the insert cracks while your trailer is connected to a vehicle, the weight of the boat can cause the tongue to buckle and contact the road surface, which could result in a crash. If you observe a gap please call you nearest dealer to take your trailer in for a final tongue inspection. If the inspection reveals that the tongue was not manufactured according to specifications, the dealer will repair it at no charge to you.

It is important that we hear from you. Please fill out and return the self-addressed, postage paid post card we have included with this letter. If you are no longer the owner of this trailer, please contact us immediately with any information you may have regarding its current ownership. My phone number is 615-494-2084 or email to jbragg@stratosboats.com. Or you may complete the new owner information section on the post card.

Sincerely,

Jason Bragg

Dear Champion Customer:

Back in June of 2006, Champion Boats, a Division of Stratos Boats, Inc. sent you a notice in accordance with the requirements of the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act because of a potential motor vehicle safety defect may exist in certain 2003 - 2006 Champion trailers that are equipped with a retractable tongue. These trailers may have a defect in the retractable tongue that poses, if it fails, a threat to your safety.

Champion included with the notice pictures showing a properly built tongue and one with a gap between the bottom insert and the brake actuator housing. If the tongue was not manufactured to the required specifications (gap is present), the bottom of the top insert could crack in the area of the gap. If the insert cracks while your trailer is connected to a vehicle, the weight of the boat can cause the tongue to buckle and contact the road surface, which could result in a crash.
