Details of the Recall

The Occupant Restraint Controller (ORC) on your vehicle may lose communication between one or more of the acceleration sensors.

This may result in a diminished capability of the airbag system to properly detect certain crash events which may result in degraded inflator outputs, late airbag deployment, or a failure to deploy. If an acceleration sensor loses communication with the ORC, the air bag warning lamp will illuminate in the instrument panel indicating a malfunction in the occupant restraint system. If this warning is not heeded, this condition may increase the risk of injury to vehicle occupants in the event of a crash.

The dealership will replace the affected sensors.
