Reason for this recall

The Renogy 210Ah Smart Lithium Iron Phosphate Battery relay contactors may become stuck in the closed position. Relays that are stuck in the closed position increase the risk of a fire during battery charging.

Recall Remedy

The remedy is currently under development. Jayco will notify you when the remedy is available. Renogy indicates that the remedy will be available in the second quarter of 2024.

What we need you to do

Jayco recommends that prior to charging your battery you verify you don't have a cell imbalance or a stuck relay contactor. A battery cell imbalance or stuck relay contactor indicates a problem with the battery and it should not be charged. Follow the enclosed instruction to inspect for a cell imbalance or stuck relay contactor. If the inspection reveals there is a cell imbalance or a stuck relay contactor you need to shut off the battery and contact your dealer.
