Technical Background

If your dealership is experiencing calibration errors during efforts to calibrate either the front or rear facing radar systems, look for any outside influence that could be affecting the process.

If your service department has an automatic door, it could be using an ultrasonic transceiver. This interference can cause an error if the calibration is being attempted while the door is being used.

Service

Make certain the calibration is not being attempted in close proximity to automatic doors that utilize an ultrasonic transceiver and that the door is not in use during the attempt.
