

The catch portion of the latch is adjustable. For the drawer that is coming open during transit, it might need to be adjusted to latch properly. The slotted openings where the screws are located allow for the catch to move forward or back if needed. If the height of the latch strike is too low for the catch portion, the catch will need to be shimmed down in order to have it meet the strike and latch on more securely.

